Course Objectives:

This course will deal with the constitutional formation and development of the European Union. It will cover the constitutional/institutional transformation of the EU, from its initial form in 1952 till the post- Lisbon developments. The EU constitutional evolution, its institutions, the legislation process, the general principles and the core doctrines of EU law, the relationship between EU law and the national law, the four freedoms established by EU law will also be examined throughout the courses EU Law I +II. The two courses will conclude with the analysis of some fundamental specialised areas of EU law, such as competition law, environmental law, and protection of personal data.

Students should be able to:

- > Comprehend the legal and political background of the whole “European” experiment since its origins and till the post-Lisbon treaty era.
- > Demonstrate a good knowledge of the key, special features of the EU legal order, i.e. supranationality, community method, intergovernmentalism, direct effect, principle of proportionality, etc.
- > Describe the institutional structure of the EU (including the previous ‘three pillars’) and its evolution (including as a legal person).
- > Consider the increasing importance and interaction between EU law and international law in the EU courts.

- > Describe the composition, functions and powers of the institutions of the EU; Outline the main legislative processes and analyse the relative degree of power which they give to each of the institutions.
- > Articulate the impact of EU membership on national sovereignty and explain the principles of supremacy, subsidiarity and of conferral of powers;
- > Describe the various sources of EU law and discuss their effect and relative importance; understand the general fundamental principles of law as far as they apply in the EU, including fundamental rights under the ECHR and the European Charter of the Protection of Fundamental Rights.
- > Explain and analyse the concepts of direct applicability, direct effect, state liability, and apply them as far as the rights of individuals to rely on a provision of EU law in their national courts are concerned; discuss the review of legality of acts of the institutions; Discuss the importance of preliminary references for questions of validity and interpretation and examine how it is triggered;
- > Discuss the rules which apply to the grant of remedies for breach of EU law by Member States and the EU's liability in contract and tort.

Learning Outcomes:

After completion of the course students are expected to be able to:

1. Have a good grasp of post-Lisbon developments, of the Eurozone problems, and of the problems surrounding the Schengen agreement and the Dublin Convention.
2. Evaluate the European Court case law in the field of four freedoms, with increased consideration given to the proportionality principle in the area of the free movement of goods.
