Course Objectives:

This course aims to offer an overview of the field of Applied Linguistics as it applies to second/foreign language teaching and learning. It examines grammar, vocabulary and reading from the viewpoint of the learner and the teacher, and focuses on the most prominent second language acquisition theories. It also examines learners as individuals by focusing on motivation, age, aptitude, learning styles and learning and communication strategies.

Learning Outcomes:

After completion of the course students are expected to be able to:

1. to critically discuss and develop ideas on the current theory and practice in second language teaching and language learning;
2. to undertake small-scale applied linguistic research;
3. to relate course inputs to their own contexts of professional practice.
