3. Current and future research work

His current work focuses on the analysis of the causes and available solutions of the current economic crisis. In relation to this project, he is studying past economic crises, crises in various parts of the world, and attempts to draw conclusions and arrive at explanations.

His future research work aims in studying the economic history and development of Cyprus, from the British occupation onwards, and relate it to the contribution of academic institutions.
In this respect he is currently researching work related to these issues and aims in coming-up with journal articles and a book on this topic.

4. Review of lecturing work and evaluation of it

Dr Violaris has been lecturing in his field since 1978.

Prior to the establishment of private Universities he has lectured at Colleges (the American academy, Intercollege), (1978-1988), at the post –graduate Mediterranean Institute of Management (1986-2009), and at the Frederick Institute of Technology and since 2007 at the Frederick University (1998 – present).

Have lectured such courses as: micro- and macro-economics, introductory and advanced level, courses on the Economics of the European Union, courses on comparative economic systems, courses on development economics, theories of economic thought, monetary economics and money and banking.

Both at his pre- Frederick employment, as well as at his years at Frederick, his evaluation by students was always very positive.

For instance in all his years (23) of lecturing at the Mediterranean Institute of Management (which was at that time the only accredited post-graduate institution, managed by the government's productivity centre), his evaluation was the best out of all other lecturers. And at the Frederick, students' evaluations range each semester from 4,5 to 5, that is they are at the highest brack

5. Review of administrative work and related contribution

Dr Violaris has been active in administrative responsibilities since his employment at the Frederick Institute of Technology.

He has served as Supervisor (Programme of study Head) from 1998 to 2007.

He has served as the elected Dean of the School of Economic Sciences & Administration at the Frederick University, between 2007 - 2013.

He has served as an elected member of the Senate, the Council's Economic Affairs Committee, as well as the Disciplinary Committee.

Through his administrative duties he has contributed in the successful accreditation of the Frederick's business-related programmes of study, has been active in encouraging and motivating the School's faculty in advancing their research work, has been monitoring the progress of its students and has addressed their academic and other problems, has helped in the budgeting of the University's priorities and has assisted in addressing students' and staff members' disciplinary-

7. Documented references of praise on the candidate's work

The Ministry of Education and Culture, through Dr Zena Poulli, Director of the Department of Secondary Education, has approved, in 2009, his book, Economics, a bilingual approach, Epiphaniou editions, 2008
ISBN 978-9963-666-87-4, to be used by the graduating students of the lyceums, in their preparation for University education.

His book has been considered by the Employers' and Industrialists' Federation, for being awarded the innovation prize (due to the book's bilingual uniqueness, which tremendously assists students in learning Economic terms and theories, both in English and Greek).
